FOR THE GOOD OF THE ANIMALS!

WA Wildlife (originally known as Native Arc) is a not-for-profit organisation located on an A-class reserve in Bibra Lake which provides medical care and rehabilitation services for approximately 4000 injured, sick, and orphaned native wildlife each year. This wonderful organisation has been on a very exciting journey over the last decade, creating WA's first wildlife veterinary hospital. They are Western Australia's leading wildlife rescue, treatment and rehabilitation service, receiving injured animals from the public, veterinarian clinics, local councils, rangers, and other wildlife centres all across WA.

It was another successful day on Tuesday 28 March when the A Crew Mine + Drill Control team got together to assist WA Wildlife with site maintenance and team bonding activities. The day started with an introduction and quick tour of the hospital by Karen, the hospital manager and volunteer Lauren. The team was split into two groups; the first team got stuck into transporting and levelling sand into enclosures, whilst the second team began clearing out an undercover area. The sand crew formed a production line which consisted of using shovels, wheelbarrows, rakes, and plenty of hard work! The cleaning crew worked together to rearrange the undercover area, moving items to the skip bin and sorting into piles of keep, donate, or throw away. As the day moved along, the team swapped activities and some members decided the garden beds were in some serious need of weeding, planting, and TLC.

As the day wrapped up, the team were able to meet and interact with some of the educational animals onsite. The team especially loved feeding the Emus and meeting Raffy the Black Cockatoo. Even though WA Wildlife has a team of 220 volunteers who work tirelessly to ensure the animals are cared for, the work the BHP team completed could never have been achieved if it wasn't for the support of this team. Thank you to Jonathon and Dan's continued guidance and ongoing motivation and for this team's hard-working attitude. We hope they enjoyed the day.
