WAREHOUSE WEAPONS

Good Sammy is a social enterprise focused on providing meaningful employment opportunities and pathways for Western Australians with disability. Their vision is to create a better future for people with disability and believe in creating inclusive workplaces as this is the foundation for an inclusive society. Good Sammy currently has 27 op shops, located from Albany to Geraldton and employs more than 265 employees with disability, in a variety of roles.

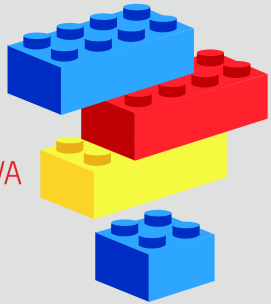

On Thursday 18th of May, the Drill control team gathered inside the Good Sammy warehouse to assist with sorting through donations. It was a busy at the warehouse as it was National Volunteer Week, with many volunteers and staff members eager to get straight into the action. The team were welcomed by Volunteer Coordinator Karen, who spoke about the mission of Good Sammy, which followed by a video of CEO Kane Blackman explaining the roles and services within the organisation. Next, the team was taken on an in-depth warehouse tour which showed the numerous donations received and how they manage to combat the issue of wastage in society.

The team was then split into three groups: books, toys, and flyers. Other tasks included building racks for the online boutique store and helping unload deliveries. Some fantastic banter was shared amongst the BHP team and the Good Sammy employees throughout the day. Each volunteer was able to rotate tasks to try something new.

Special thanks to Kristy Roberts and her team for their willingness to try every task and giving a helping hand! The Good Sammy staff were overwhelmed by the teams efforts and couldn't thank them enough. Thanks BHP 😊
